

Nothing could be inure gloomy than Honuparte's entrane.e into Paris, He arrived at night 111 tit*⁴ midst. <»!' a tliirk lug. The streets were almost deserted, and a vaj^ur feeling of terror prevailed almost generally in the capital.

At xiiwMr clock on the same evening the wry hour of Bonaparte's arrival at the Tuileries, a laily, ft Friend of my family, and whose son served in the Youn^iiuard, called and reij nested to nee Madame dc» Kourrienne. She refused to ent»r the housu lest she should be, seen, and my sister-in-law went down to the, garden to speak to her without a light. Tina lady's brother had, been on the preceding night to Pontainebleau to see Bonaparte, and hi had directed his sister to desire me to remain in 'Paris, and to retain my post in the Prefecture uf the Police, an I was mire of a full and nunplete pardon.

On the morning of the Iflst f *eisentl liertfin, who lias since been the victim of his mad enterprises, called at my house and requested to speak with me and Madame <le Hf»urrii*nne. lit* was received by my wife's* sinter anil brothers, and stated that he cjune from M, de- (Jauhiiiiiffiirt t»> renew tin* assuran(*e.H of safety which had already been given to iu«». I \vas, I cmifeHH, very Hensible of tht*He proofs of frifidxhip when t!i«y raim to my knowledge, btit I did not for a single moment repeat the course I adopted. I could not forget, the intrigiten f»f which I had been the object «i nee. 1811, nor the eontiutial thrt*af-M of arrest which, during that year, had not left me n nti intent's quiet; and since I now revert tx> tlr.it titn«\ I may take the opportunity of explaining how in IK14 I wan iintde acquainted with the real cauneH of the |H*rs«»i*utii»it ti» whieli I had. been a prey. A person, whone tutitte j>nicli*iu*t* fWbtdti me mentioning, communkated tc» m« the following letter, tluuirigi-rial copy of which is in my pii»s<«iicii : «—

MON$IEUB LK Dtic im BAH«4Mci — I you w»ttit» v0ry itii| x)rf «nt documents raspeeting th« Sifur Hour rii*!in% itm! tn'tf y«tt will itmk<* HI n Gonfidential report on tills affair, KI*^J» tht'»»i* ilw-iiiitriiIM fur yciniwlf alone. This btmlni»« dttmands th« titttifmt «»i"r«wy» Kvi*rytltuic Indtitrft me to believe that Boiirrinrin« ha* «mrrli'«l ait n wf intrigue wltli London. Bring rat tlio report on Thttniduy* I <I*ni» pfr,

PARIS, 26th December, mil.